

Michelle Fine is a Distinguished Professor of Social Psychology, Women's Studies and Urban Education at the Graduate Center, CUNY, New York. Trained in the tradition of Kurt Lewin, Fine's work addresses the intersection of public policy and social research, particularly with respect to youth in schools and criminal justice. Over the past decade, Fine's scholarship has been recognized nationally and internationally with awards, fellowships and prestigious invited lectures. Fine's research is considered highly influential and extremely well cited within four academic fields: urban education policy; prison reform; theoretical justice studies within psychology, and mixed methods/participatory action research. She has authored, co-authored or edited 20 academic books, 70 chapters in key national and international volumes and more than 80 articles in most highly competitive journals within the disciplines of psychology and education, including the American Psychologist, the Journal of Social Issues, the Counseling Psychologist, Harvard Educational Review.